

Representative Takai's Survey of Legislators in the Military

Overview

After the November 2005 elections, Hawaii State Representative K. Mark Takai began the tedious task of surveying state legislatures throughout the country to identify and contact those state legislators who also serve in the United States military as members of their states' National Guard or of the United States reserves. The results from the first survey were released in August 2006.

The 2009 survey identified 65 current state legislators who also serve in the U.S. military, a decrease from the 73 legislators identified in the 2008 survey. A total of 68 legislators were identified in the 2007 survey and 57 legislators were identified in the first survey in 2006.

Survey Instrument

The survey was a simple one-page survey that polled legislators throughout the country on a few items of interest. Besides identifying those legislators who also serve in the military, another purpose of the instrument was to identify those legislators who were currently or previously on active duty for an extended amount of time, and/or were deployed while serving as a legislator.

This year's survey was initiated in January 2009 and finalized in September 2009. The office analyzed numerous websites and newspaper clippings to obtain information for the legislators that did not return a survey.

Analysis

One of the challenges facing legislators who serve in the military is the possibility of deployments and activations. Although there are no federal laws that prohibit state lawmakers from serving on active duty with the military, there are specific requirements for state lawmakers who are activated and/or deployed.

The much-quoted Department of Defense Directive 1344.10, revised on February 19, 2008, generally prohibits a full-time military service member on active duty from holding or exercising the functions of civil office in state government.

For reserve component members on active duty service for 270 days or less, paragraph 4.5.4 of DoDD 1344.10 allows these members to "hold and exercise the functions of a civil office provided there is no interference with the performance of military duties."

For reserve component members on active duty service for more than 270 days, paragraph 4.5.3 of DoDD 1344.10 allows these members to "hold – but shall NOT exercise – the functions of a civil office."

This analysis shows that of the 65 state legislators who are also serving in the military, nearly 48 percent – 31 of them have been deployed to another country for longer than 30 days (see Table H). Not surprisingly, many of the deployments of state legislators have been to the Middle East and have occurred within the last five years.

The analysis identified eight legislators who have been deployed more than once during their legislative careers. Colorado Rep. Joe Rice has served on four deployments (Bosnia and Iraq thrice). Texas Rep. Frank Corte has served on three deployments (Egypt, South Korea and Iraq). Tennessee Rep. John Windle has served on two deployments (Kosovo and Iraq). Colorado Rep. David Balmer has served on two deployments (Afghanistan and Bosnia). Florida Rep. Michael Scionti has served two deployments (both in Afghanistan). Indiana Rep. Scott Reske has served on two deployments (Haiti and Iraq). Iowa Rep. Royd Chambers has served two deployments (Germany and Qatar). New Mexico Sen. William Payne has served two deployments (both in the Middle East) (see Table H).

Legislators across the country have also been activated for long-term duty (period lasting for more than 139 days). More than 42 percent – a total of 27 legislators surveyed – have said that they have served on extended activations (see Table G).

A total of 31 legislators or more than 48 percent have been deployed or been activated for long-term duty (Louisiana Rep. Nicholas Larusso and West Virginia Sen. Erik Wells have served on long-term activation and have not been deployed).

A total of 34 state legislatures currently have at least one member serving in the military (see Table B). Pennsylvania leads with five legislators serving in the military; South Carolina has four legislators, while Iowa, Missouri, Washington, and Wisconsin all have three.

The analysis also broke down these legislators by the branch of service that they are serving. The Army has 42 serving in the military, while the Air Force has ten legislators, Navy with seven legislators, and the Marine Corps has six legislators serving (see Table C).

The analysis also looked at which legislators were serving in the National Guard and which ones were serving in the Reserves. A total of 31 legislators are serving in their states' National Guard units, while 34 legislators are serving in their respective Reserve units (see Table D).

The analysis also looked at political affiliations. A total of 41 of these legislators are Republicans, while 24 are Democrats (see Table E1 and Table E2).

Of the 73 legislators who also serve in the military, four legislators were elected for the very first time in 2008, six were elected for the very first time in 2007 and eight were elected for the very first time in 2006. Among the four newly elected legislators, three were Republican and one was a Democrat (see Table F1, Table F2 and Table F3).

Most of the legislators currently serving in the military were reservists prior to running for office. Eight legislators joined the National Guard or Reserves after getting into elected office.

Conclusion

This analysis shows that there is a critical mass of legislators who also serve in our nation's military.

THE NATIONAL NETWORK OF LEGISLATORS IN THE MILITARY

The three purposes of the National Network of Legislators in the Military (NNLM) are to (1) provide information and guidance to those legislators who are or will be activated or deployed; (2) to provide a forum that will allow legislators to share "best practices" and model legislation to support the military in their respective states; and (3) to provide an opportunity to organizations and companies supporting our military to work with the network's members.
