Over the past half century, better dental care and fluoridation has transformed American oral health. Run-away tooth decay and rows of missing teeth, once commonplace, are now rarer than ever. But this evolution has not proceeded evenly. Millions of children, especially poor and minority kids, are needlessly suffering from oral health problems. So we have organized to defend our nation’s progress and ensure that more children get the basic dental care they need to grow, learn and lead healthy lives.

Campaign for Dental Health

The Campaign for Dental Health was created to ensure every American has access to the cheapest, most effective way to protect teeth—water fluoridation. The campaign is comprised of a network of local children’s and oral health advocates, health professionals, and scientists who are working together to preserve America’s gains in oral health. The campaign believes, quite simply, that life is better with teeth. The mission of the Campaign and the ILikeMyTeeth.org Web site is to share facts about oral health and preventive strategies like fluoride.

ILikeMyTeeth.org

The ILikeMyTeeth.org Web site provides a wealth of information for anyone interested in ensuring optimal oral health for all Americans. Informational destinations include:

- Issues: Outlines information on key oral health issues including the use of fluoride, ensuring access to dental care, and educating Americans on the importance of oral health.
- Local Campaigns: Features a list of local oral health campaign sites and information on how to get involved in states such as California, New York, Maine, Oregon, New Hampshire, Wisconsin, Michigan, Florida, and Kansas.
- News & Reports: Hosts a catalogue of recent news articles and reports on topics related to key oral health issues.
- Blog: Provides insight on the perspective of the campaign on the latest news, reports, and emerging oral health issues.

For additional information or questions about oral health issues, contact the Campaign for Dental health at Input@ILikeMyTeeth.org.

www.facebook.com/CampaignforDentalHealth  www.twitter.com/ILikeMyTeeth